Local Stores Prepare For Increase in 1936

Apparently 1936 is going to be a bigger and better year for Ocean Beach business people for preparations are now being made were several concerns will move into enlarged quarters.

The Strand Radio company expects to move January 1st from their store next door to the post office, one door west, into the Kraft building, the room at present is being remodeled to accommodate this business which is adding to its stock every week.

The 5c to $1 Store in the Lipsett store building has taken a five year lease on the Holdridge building, in the old days the Main Garage. Mr. Holdridge has let the contract for a general remodeling of this whole structure, 50x100 feet, to have a new roof, a ceiling inside, and a thoroly modern and up-to-date front of plate glass box style show windows. Mr. and Mrs. Lownes, proprietors of the variety store, have increased their business tremendously since opening here and have outgrown their present quarters. They hope to move about February 1st.

Planning Commission Votes Against Pier at Sunset Cliffs

At the public hearing held yesterday afternoon before the City Planning Commission, protest was made by a number of citizens of Sunset Cliffs led by H. Collins, protesting against the construction of a fishing pier and other improvement at Sunset Cliffs park. Collins claimed he represented twenty-one residents of the Sunset Cliffs tract.

Several talks in favor of the project were made by Supervisor Ed Hastings, Councilman Al Bennett, Frank B. McElwee, Albert Dumont and other Ocean Beach residents.

Following the discussion a vote of the Commission showed four members voting against locating this proposed pier at Sunset Cliffs while three members voted in favor of it.

It appears that just a few people, most of whom are uninformed as to the value of this project may be able to hold up an improvement that would have been worth thousands of dollars and a lot of pleasure to the hundreds of California and Arizona people who enjoy this sport.

The City Council will likely on next Tuesday again have the matter for their consideration.

OCEAN BEACH YOUTH 'SOLOS' INTO GOOD JOB

(San Diego Union)

Yancy Adams jr., apparently is going to learn flying "from the ground up."

For several months, after he quit school, Yancy worked hard—on the ground—at a flying field just south of National City.

Today, he has graduated to the "upper" brackets. He has made his first solo flight—with only 10 hours and 45 minutes of instruction. And h has a new job—at Consolidated Aircraft Corp.

He is interested in aviation—kenly so, but says little about it. It wouldn't do for Yancy's father to show too much pride in his son, perhaps, but a dad is a dad, and Lt. Yancy Adams, stationed at the East San Diego police substation, likes to talk about this "first solo hop."

Christmas Benefit Card Party Tonight

The Xmas benefit card party to be given at the Ocean Beach Woman's club on Friday evening, Dec. 13, promises to be the most successful affair of its nature to be held in this community in many years. Sponsored by the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post, and the American Legion post, the purpose of the party is to raise cash funds for Christmas baskets for the needy families of our community. None of the proceeds will go to any individual or organizations, but will be utilized solely for the purpose of giving holiday cheer to those who, otherwise would be forced to count Christs' Day, "just another dreary day."

The committee on tickets reports a whole hearted response to their efforts.

The committee on arrangements have carefully planned their work and assure all and sundry that all will be in readiness for the players upon their arrival at the scene of action.

Commander Fred H. Norris, Lt. Bert A. Allen post, V. F. W. and commander Logan E. Ruggles, post 433, American Legion take this opportunity of thanking all fellow citizens for their hearty support.

STRAND THEATRE TO GIVE BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

The Strand theartre on the above date offers an exceptionally fine attraction showing, "Stars Over Broadway" with Pat O'Brien, James Melton and Jane Froman. Also "The Goose and the Gander," with Kay Francis, Geo. Brent and Ralph Forbes. As added attractions, will be shown a West India Cruise. Travel and News weekly. Bring your CAN and enjoy the afternoon.

School Bond Issue Fails To Pass

San Diegans defeated the $2,500,000 school rehabilitation bond issue Tuesday, but board members and others announced the defeat probably was due to a misunderstanding of factors involved.

Both the $1,400,000 high school and $1,100,000 elementary bonds, designed to safeguard the schools against earthquake damage went down to defeat by similar majorities.

The vote was as follows:

High School Bonds
Yes	6088
No	7849
Elementary Bonds
Yes	6138
No	7832

Only about 20 per cent of the registered vote was cast, the semi-official returns indicated last night.

In only seven precincts did the bonds even poll a majority, let alone the necessary two-thirds. These were Loma Portal, Roosevelt, John Muir, McKinley, Chollas, Stockton and Lincoln.

The biggest majority for the bonds was turned in by Loma Portal, which voted 218 to 127 in favor of the issue. This, however, was below the necessary two-thirds.

The biggest majority against the bonds was registered at Sherman, where the "no" vote was 336 to 157.

Ocean Beach 6 precincts voted 174 yes; 252 no

Mission Bay State Park To Be Improved at Once

Immediate start on improvement of Mission Bay state park was announced Tuesday when Gov. Frank Merriam received the approval of President Roosevelt for expenditure of $479,260 in federal funds on the project.

Glenn Rick, engineer for the city planning commission, said last night that the project calls for filling in of approximately 100 acres on the eastern side of the park along Pacific blvd, and the creation of a boat channel in the area from which the fill soil is taken, and that similar work will be done along the western side of the park, creating 100 acres of fill adjacent to Bayside walk, Mission Beach, to be used for park purposes. Here, also, a boat channel will be created.

Each newly-filled area will be made in back of heavy rock seawalls intended to protect the new lands from encrachment of high tides or from flood waters of the San Diego river. The Ed Fletcher Co. has obligated itself to contribute 100,000 tons of rock, 7000 yards of granite and 3700 yards of sand for these seawalls.

The city and its harbor department are supplying considerable equipment, including 12 trucks and a tractor, and the county has appropriated $4000 cash and has offered equipment. All of these contributions are in addition to the $479,260 being spent by the government, making the total value of the work to be done well over $600,000.

The work will be done by unemployed men housed at Camp Kearny and that dredging and material will cost $231,910. About 600,000 yards of earth are to be moved in making the two fills, both of which, it was stated will extend along part of the Pacific Beach frontage of the bay.

"This is only a start, but a substantial one, on the plans for ultimate improvement of the state's park at Mission Bay," Rick said. "The shores of the bay extend for a distance of 11 miles, and it would cost many times the present appropriation to complete work on all of it. After the shore lines are developed properly, start will be made on several islands in the center of the bay. The gratifying thing is that a substantial start is being made."

Duty Is That Which Is Done for Good of Others

What is duty? With regard to ourselves it is to be independent of the senses, and with regard to others, it is to be untiring in giving help and support; help to live well, to will well, to wish well; help by agreement and by opposition, by giving and by withholding, by firmness and by compliance, by praise and by blame, by silence and by words, by what is pleasant and by what is painful.

Dwellers on the same earth, travelers of the same hour, and companions along the same road, we ought to help one another; and when we reach the resting place, we shall have first to render an account of what each has done for the happiness of the rest—for joy, or for goodness. A kind look will win its reward.

Roosevelt's Speech at Georgia Homecoming

ONE hundred thousand Democrats, mostly Georgians, gathered in the stadium of Georgia Tech at Atlanta for a homecoming and heard President Roosevelt deliver a characteristic speech, full of confidence, assurance of prosperity and praise for what the New Deal has accomplished. And he did not neglect to attack warmly the critics of his administration. In reviewing the economic and social advances since his inauguration he gave out what was considered the keynote for his campaign for re-election, and definitely announced his candidacy—unnecessarily—by asserting that life in the United States has improved in the last two and a half years and will continue to improve "if I have anything to do with it."

President Roosevelt

Mr. Roosevelt promised that lavish government spending was over and that the nation could look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit, and asserted that the government credit is higher than that of any other great nation. He bitterly criticized the treasury policies prior to his entrance into the White House, traced the relief policies as opposed to doles and declared that the peak of appropriations has passed.

The President said farm income in the United States has risen since 1932 a total of nearly three billions and this additional farm income "has meant the rebirth of city business, the reopening of closed factories, the doubling of automobile production, the improvement of transportation and the giving of new employment to millions of people."

"The word 'progress,'" concluded Mr. Roosevelt, "is a better word than 'recovery', for it means not only a sound business and a sound agriculture from the material point of view, but it means, with equal importance, a sound improvement in American life as a result of continuing and forceful effort on the part of our people, and, through them, on the part of their government. I am certain that that is your purpose; and that is why I continue my confidence, my faith in the people of America."

In those phrases and in his high praise of the New Deal experiments, the President made clear his intention of carrying on his program for altering and bettering the social and economic life of the American people regardless of the return of material prosperity.

Governor Talmadge of Georgia, who though a Democrat is a severe critic of the President and many of his policies, pointedly absented himself from the meeting in Atlanta, spending the day on his farm. Several days later he replied to Mr. Roosevelt's speech in a radio address.

Republican opinion of the President's address might be summarized in the remark of Harrison E. Spangler, director of the Chicago G. O. P. headquarters: "Gulliver has started his travels again and we'll all be hearing some more tall stories."

Situation in Europe Is Becoming Tenser

EUROPEAN diplomats, especially the British and Premier Laval of France, are exceedingly clever and resourceful, but if they are to extricate their nations from the present threatening state of affairs they will need all their smartness. Though decision as to the imposition of an oil embargo against Italy was postponed until December 9 to give Laval a chance to conciliate Mussolini, the duce refused to make any gesture toward peace. Italians were authoritatively warned not to mistake diplomatic exchanges between their premier and the representatives of Great Britain and France as "peace talk," and were told there was no reason to believe Mussolini had modified his minimum terms already presented to Sir Eric Drummond and Laval's representative. Also he has declined further to conciliate Britain by removing more troops from Libya and has repeated his warning that he will consider an oil embargo an unfriendly gesture. He and all Italians are especially resentful against Great Britain, which apparently intends to insist on the oil ban. And now they are getting very sore at France, despite Laval's efforts to maintain friendly relations between the two countries. There were reports that Italian troops were being massed along the French frontier.

Sir Samuel Hoare

The British government was engrossed with the troublous situation. Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, received timely orders from his physician to take a rest in Switzerland, and it was announced he would stop in Paris for a conference with Premier Laval. The admiralty was preparing for eventualities and ordered officers of the royal navy reserve to report at once for duty at Plymouth. These men have been serving as officers and engineers in the merchant marine.

All members of the League of Nations, including Italy, are exceedingly anxious to know what will be the course of the United States concerning the oil embargo.

End of Federal Relief Shifts Millions to WPA Rolls

WITH the end of November direct federal relief came to an end, and it was officially announced that 3,500,000 persons had been shifted from relief rolls to the WPA pay rolls and put to work. Other millions of employables who have been receiving the federal dole but who cannot be hired by the Works Progress administration because state quotas have been filled must be cared for by the states which will be helped by the final allotments made by the FERA before it went out of existence. As for the "unemployables," numbering perhaps 4,000,000, Aubrey Williams, assistant administrator, said the problem of their care would be solved satisfactorily.

Statistical charts on the relief situation, prepared by the research section of the FERA, were issued in pamphlet form and show that unemployment decreased about 3,000,000 in the first two years of the Roosevelt administration.

New Corn-Hog Program Announced by Wallace

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE announced the corn-hog program for 1936-37. Designed to maintain a balance between the interests of the producer and the consumer, this new plan will permit a 30 per cent increase in hog production next year over 1935, thus preparing the way for possible reductions in pork prices to the housewife; and to restrict corn acreage to about 95,000,000 acres, an increase of about 1,400,000 acres, over the amount harvested this year.

Sec'y Wallace

After appraisal by community committees and review by county allotment committees, a corn acreage base and a market hog base will be fixed. Co-operating producers must agree to plant corn next year on at least 25 per cent of their base acreages. They will be permitted to retire from 10 to 30 per cent of their base acreage for soil-improving or erosion-preventing purposes. Hog growers must agree to produce between 50 and 100 per cent of the base market production.

The 1936 corn adjustment payment will be 35 cents a bushel on the appraised yield times the adjusted acreage, less the pro rata share of local administrative expenses.

Corn adjustment payments will be made in two installments. The first, at the rate of 20 a bushel, is to be made about August 1. The second will come due about December 31, 1936, at the rate of 15 cents per bushel.

A payment of $1.25 per head will be made on each hog in the base. Deductions will be made at the rate of $2.50 per head if a producer fails to raise 50 per cent of his base numbers. The total payment to a producer will be the same for a production ranging from 50 per cent to 100 per cent of his base.

The 1937 rates will be announced by November 30, 1936, but the rate on corn will not be less than 30 cents per bushel and the rate on hogs will not be less than $1.25 per head.

President May Attend National Convention

THERE is a possibility that President Roosevelt will attend the national Democratic convention which will re-nominate him. It was reported in a Baltimore paper that he wished the convention to be held in an eastern city, and some one at the White House, when asked about this, replied:

"Maybe. The President might want to go, and he would not want to travel too far."

Philadelphia has been under consideration by Democratic leaders, it was learned, but the question of money remains a prime consideration in the choice of the host city.

Death of Dr. J. H. Breasted, Noted Orientalist

DR. JAMES HENRY BREASTED of the University of Chicago, one of the world's leading orientalists, died in New York of an illness contracted on shipboard as he was returning from a visit to research expeditions in the Near East which were under his direction. He was seventy years old. His expeditions to Egypt and eastern Asia and his excavations there added vastly to the history of civilization.

Princess Victoria, favorite sister of King George of England, died at her home in Buckinghamshire at the age of sixty-seven. She suffered from ill health through most of her life and never was married.

Amnesty for Greek Rebels Decreed by King

KING GEORGE II of Greece has decreed amnesty for the participants in the abortive revolt of last March, but he specified that "persons considered dangerous" may be confined, if necessary, to certain localities. The confiscated fortunes of the leaders were returned. The king succeeded in forming a neutral cabinet with Constantine Demerdjis, a law professor, as premier, though the friends of General Kondylis, leader in the restoration coup, were displeased.

German Pastors Rebel Against Censorship

HANS KERRL, German church dictator, has stirred up another great row by placing a censorship on the Confessional synod to prevent the pastors from sending out communications which have not received his approval. The pastors resented this hotly and adopted the course of making all announcements from their pulpits rather than in pastoral letters first submitted to Kerrl. The preachers also told their congregations frankly just what they thought of Kerrl and his orders.

War Between Japan and China Draws Nearer

DOWNRIGHT war between the Chinese armies of Dictator Chiang Kai-shek and the Japanese appeared almost certain when the autonomy movement in north China was revived in eastern Hopei and Chahar provinces by Yin Ju-keng, the administrative commissioner and friend of Japan. Leaders of the rest of the region were undecided on their course, but Japanese troops began to pour in by the trainload. Three thousand of them with full war equipment arrived in Tientsin, and the garrison at Peiping was more than doubled. The Fengtai railway junction a few miles from Peiping was seized, Colonel Takasashi, military attache, asserting this was necessary because the rolling stock was being moved south, threatening the isolation of the Japanese forces.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek

In Nanking officials said the National government was determined to meet with force any attempt to force autonomy on the territory south of Hopei and Chahar provinces, and the executive Yuan proclaimed five sweeping reforms designed to stop the spread of the movement. Chiang was hurrying large bodies of troops to the northward.

Mississippi Valley Body Adopts Resolutions

MEETING in St. Louis, the Mississippi Valley association adopted resolutions opposing any attempt to limit the "right of water carriers to establish and maintain such port to port rates as they see fit."

The convention, which again went on record as opposing the co-ordination of transportation agencies under the interstate commerce commission, criticized I. C. C. rulings "which have the effect of permitting railroads to cut rates . . . for the purpose of killing off waterway transportation."

The delegates representing midcontinent agricultural, shipping, and industrial interests of 25 states, again opposed ratification of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty.

Col. Robert Isham Randolph of Chicago was elected president of the association.

New Evidence Reported in Hauptmann Case

BRUNO RICHARD HAUPTMANN'S attorneys assert that some of the Lindbergh ransom money has been found in Massachusetts and that their investigators also have discovered some pieces of evidence that are of great importance to the defense. The doomed man himself issued a statement calling on Dr. John F. Condon ("Jafsie") to "make a full confession" of what he knows concerning the kidnaping and murder of Colonel Lindbergh's little son.

Ickes Revives Dispute Over Steel Prices

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR ICKES has revived the controversy between the New Dealers and the big steel corporations concerning steel prices. Mr. Ickes said there was "prima facie evidence of collusion" in identical bids on a Florida public works project. The PWA administrator said the four companies bidding $185,000 each on 3,300 tons of steel for a Miami dock—Inland, Carnegie, Jones & Laughlin, and Kalman (a Bethlehem subsidiary)—were the same that submitted identical bids on an ocean terminal at Morehead City, N. C., and the Triborough bridge in New York city.

Sec'y Ickes

In the two earlier instances German concerns underbid and were awarded the contracts. Amid protests from industry and labor Ickes then halted all additional foreign purchases and raised the differential in favor of domestic materials from 15 to 25 per cent.

There was no foreign bidder on the Miami project and Mr. Ickes said the contract would be awarded to the concern "that is farthest away and has to pay the highest freight bill—the object is to spread prosperity around."

Community Santa Claus

By Alice B. Palmer

THE gigantic Christmas tree in Fountain square was ablaze with colored lights and decorations. Christmas eve had arrived and the snowy atmosphere was beautifully depositing the finishing touches to the grand and wonderful community tree. Even though all the celebrations had taken place elsewhere the big tree had never failed to stand in its place of honor in the center of town on Christmas eve.

Mirth, happiness and laughter fairly abounded through the joyous Christmas crowds as they thronged the streets blinking through the snowflakes and hurrying on to celebrations. They seemed to take the community tree for granted until the illustrious sound of sleighbells was heard in the distance. Sleighbells on Christmas eve—how delectable! All eyes were turned in the direction from which they came.

Soon the object of the delightful disturbance came into sight. A bright red sleigh drawn by six horses, cleverly decorated to represent reindeers, turned the corner and headed toward Fountain square. All traffic was stopped instantly as the children made a frantic rush to meet their Santa—the real Santa Claus from the North pole!

"It must be the real one," shouted one little fellow, "for only the really true one has reindeers. I know, 'cause my mother told me so."

'Midst wild shouts of merriment Santa, himself, in his bright red and white costume and long white beard, alighted from the sleigh with a jovial, good-natured, "Merry Christmas, merry Christmas to you all!" The children swarmed about him in uncontrollable confusion as he joyously dragged forth pack after pack bulging with bright colored toys and dolls of all descriptions.

What could it mean? Who was this strange real Santa Claus with sleigh and reindeers from the North pole? The people marvelled! The children were boisterous and completely out of control. Everyone forgot his own particular celebration and lingered on to see what it was all about.

Then jolly old St. Nick, his beard flowing in the breezes, began digging down into his packs and passing out the toys to the youngsters.

"Oh, boy!" shouted one, "see what I got—an airplane." Then two little girls cried out, joyously, as they unwrapped golden-haired dollies.

On and on Santa continued as the crowd became greater and greater and the snowstorm grew heavier and heavier. Santa's packs seemed to be endless. Soon gay colored balloons, drums, harmonicas and gold and silver horns were in evidence on all sides, adding to the gayety of the Christmas party.

There was a lull as Santa Claus dug down into still another pack. This time he began hurling large oranges and sacks of candy into the crowd and they were catching them 'midst much laughter and excitement.

Santa himself was having the time of his life. Even more so, than the happy crowd about him. For he was chuckling within, because he had been reminded by a Christmas messenger of love to do this very thing and to become the community Santa Claus.

Finally the crowd became impatient to learn who their strange, chuckling Santa really was. Who could it be, who had given so generously and impartially to all? But before they had time to speak, the jolly old fellow was jostling past people, snow and traffic until he scrambled into his sleigh.

"Get up, reindeers!" he shouted.

With a jerk the sleigh bounded forward with Santa wildly shouting, "Merry Christmas, folks, merry Christmas to all!"

But he wasn't to get away so easily for the next moment a strong north wind, whistling around the corner, tore off whiskers, mask and all, and Santa Claus stood revealed in all his embarrassment!

A hushed silence at first and then a wild shout of joy and surprise rang through the Christmas atmosphere. 'Twas "Indian Pete," the town's most confirmed miser. Never in all their lives had they seen such a glorious smile on his face, as he gazed out from his Christmas regalia and offered his hand in friendly greeting to all.

"Indian Pete" (so named because of his love for the outdoor life), had given without thought of receiving; and had incidentally received more than he ever could have received materially—the respect and adoration of the whole town.

Fishing Fleet Conducts Funeral for Ghost Ship

The Flying Dutchman, encountered usually in the neighborhood of Cape Horn, and prophesying disaster at that most dreaded ocean corner, is the most famous of ghost ships, but now we hear that another sinister vessel has taken to appearing and disappearing in the South seas. It takes the form of a phantom launch, which haunts the fishing grounds near Chatham islands, a lonely outpost 400 miles southeast of New Zealand.

Four years ago the craft was first reported, and soon afterwards a launch in which 11 fishermen were going to a football match foundered, all being drowned. More recently a lonely fisherman claimed to have seen it; a few days later he was swept overboard to oblivion by a heavy sea. Perhaps with the idea of exorcising this grim visitant, the whole fishing fleet assembled on the approximate spot, and held a solemn funeral service. The ghostly launch is said to appear in misty weather and to travel at supernatural speed.

Dam Faced With Marble

An attraction, for visitors at Athens is a dam, recently constructed to supply the city with water, faced with marble. The stone is taken from a quarry which once supplied ancient Greek sculptors.

"Don't you think it would be wiser if I took care of it for you, Hortie?" suggested she demurely. "You are dreadfully careless. Only a moment ago you had no idea where the ring was. If it is on my finger you'll know exactly."

"Bully idea! So I shall! Now tell me where you're off to. You were in a frightful hurry when you burst through that door."

"So I was," agreed Sylvia. "And here I am loitering and almost forgetting my errand. Come! We must hurry. I've got to go to town. Want to row me over?"

"You bet your life! Show me the boat."

Leading the way to the yellow dory, she took her place opposite him and he pushed off.

As they sat facing one another, her eyes roamed over his brown suit; his matching tie, handkerchief and socks; his immaculate linen; his general air of careful grooming, and she could not but admit he wore his clothes well. He was not a small town product.

Three years in an eastern preparatory school, followed by four years of college life had knocked all that might have been provincial out of Horatio Junior.

Nevertheless these reflections, interesting though they were, proved nothing about his knowledge of the water.

Then she suddenly became aware that the boat was being guided by a master hand.

"Why, Hortie Fuller, I had no idea you could row like this!" exclaimed she with admiration.

Horatio deigned no response.

"Wherever did you learn to pull such an oar?"

"Varsity Crew."

"Of course. I had forgotten," she apologized, her eyes following as with each splendid stroke the craft shot forward.

Although the oarsman ignored her approbation he was not unmindful of it.

"Where do we land?" he asked.

"Anywhere."

He bent forward and with one final magnificent sweep sent the nose of the dory out of the channel.

"Come on," he called, leaping to the beach.

"But—but, Hortie—I can't get ashore here. I'll wet my white shoes."

"Jump."

"It's too far. Pull the boat higher on the sand."

"Not on your life. Jump, darling! I'll catch you."

She stood up in the bow.

"I can't. It's too far."

"Nonsense! Where's your sporting blood? Don't be afraid. I'm right here."

"Suppose you shouldn't catch me?"

"But I shall."

He would. She was certain of it. Still she wavered.

"I don't want to jump," she pouted.

"You'll have to. Come on, Beautiful. You're wasting time."

"I think you are perfectly horrid," she flung out as she sprang forward.

An instant later she was in his arms and tight in a grip she knew herself powerless to loosen.

"Let me go, Hortie! Let me go!" she pleaded.

"I shall, sweetheart. All in good time. Before I set you free, though, we must settle one trivial point. Are we engaged or are we not?"

She made no answer.

"If we're not," he went on, "I intend to duck you in the water. If we are, you shall tell me you love me and go free."

A swift, shy smile illuminated her face.

"I—I—don't want to be ducked, Hortie," she murmured, raising her arms to his neck.

"You precious thing! You shan't be. Now the rest of it. Say you love me."

"I guess you know that."

"But I wish to hear you say it."

"I—I—think I do."

"That's a half-hearted statement."

"I—I—know I do, Hortie."

"Ah, that is better. And I love you, Sylvia. Loving you is an old, old story with me—a sort of habit. I shall never change. You are too much a part of me, Sylvia. Now pay the boatman and you shall go. One is too cheap. Two is miserly. The fare is three. I won't take less."

"I consider your methods despicable," announced the girl when at last he reluctantly put her down on her feet. "You blackmailed me."

"I know my Sylvia," he countered. "Perhaps you'd rather I trundled back to New York tomorrow and offered the ring to Estelle."

"Silly! I was only fooling," she protested quickly, linking her arm in his. "This ring would never fit Estelle, dearest. Her hands are tremendous. Didn't you ever notice them? They are almost as large as a man's. I never saw such hands."

"She's an awful nice girl just the same."

"I don't doubt that. Come. We must quit fooling now and hurry or we shall never get home. Marcia will be frantic."

"Marcia?"

"My aunt. I have so much to tell you I hardly know where to begin," sighed Sylvia. "Do listen carefully, for I need your advice."

"What about?"

"A lot of things. It is a long story. You see Marcia has fallen in love with a robber."

"A robber? Your aunt?"

"Uh-huh. I know it sounds odd, but you will understand it better after you have heard the details," nodded Sylvia. "This man, a jewel thief, came to our house one day shipwrecked and hurt, so we took him in. We didn't know then, of course, that he was a thief. Afterward, when we did, he was sick and we hadn't the heart to turn him out. In fact we couldn't have done it anyway. He was too fascinating. He was one of the most fascinating men you ever saw."

"He must have been," Horatio growled.

"Oh, he was. I myself almost lost my heart to him," confessed Sylvia earnestly. "Marcia did."

"Your aunt?"

"Yes. Don't look so horrified, Hortie. I realize it seems queer, unconventional; but you'll understand better when you see Marcia. She is no ordinary person."

"I shouldn't think she was."

Sylvia ignored the comment.

"Well, anyway, the robber hid the loot and of course Marcia and I did all we could to protect him.

"Then one day the Wilton sheriff heard over the radio there had been a jewel robbery on Long Island, and stumbling upon the hidden gems, arrested Mr. Heath."

"Mr. Heath?"

"The thief, Hortie! The thief! How can you be so stupid?"

"I get you now. You must admit, though, this is some story to understand."

"I know it sounds confused, but in reality it is perfectly simple if you'll just pay attention. Well," the girl hurried on, "I cannot stop to explain all the twists and turns but anyway, the sheriff brought the burglar to Wilton and Marcia is broken-hearted."

"Broken-hearted! I should think she'd be thankful to be rid of him."

"But you keep forgetting she's in love with him."

"Well, do you wonder I do? What kind of a woman is your aunt? What sort of a gang have you got in with anyhow?"

"Hush, Hortie! You mustn't talk like that," Sylvia declared. "This affair is too serious. Marcia and the—the—she and Mr. Heath love one another. It is terrible because, you see, he has a wife."

"I should call that a stroke of Providence, myself."

"Horatio, I think you are being very nasty. You are joking about something that is no joking matter."

"I beg your pardon, dear. I wasn't really joking. Don't be angry. But this yarn is unbelievable—preposterous," explained the man, taking her hand and gently caressing it.

"Let Me Go, Hortie! Let Me Go!"

"Well, when Mr. Heath went away from the Homestead, he left behind him a hundred dollars in payment for what Marcia had done for him. It almost killed her."

"She—she—thought she ought to have had more, you mean? A hundred dollars is quite a sum in these days. She would better have grabbed it tight and been thankful. My respect for this bandit chap is rising. I should call him an honest gentleman."

"It is useless to talk with you, Horatio—I can see that," Sylvia said, stiffening. "A delicate affair like this is evidently beyond your comprehension. You cannot seem to understand it. All you do is to make light of every word I say."

"I'm not making light. On the contrary I guess I am taking the situation far more seriously than you are. I don't like the moral tone of this place at all. It looks to me as if you had got into most undesirable surroundings. The sooner you are married to me, young woman, and out of here the better. As for this remarkable aunt of yours—"

"Stop, Horatio! Stop right where you are," bridled Sylvia. "One more word against Marcia and back home you go so fast you won't be able to see for dust. I'm in earnest, so watch your step."

"The woman has bewitched you," frowned Horatio.

"She has. She bewitches everybody. She'll bewitch you."

"Not on your life!"

"Wait and see. Mr. Heath will bewitch you, too."

"The—the—?"

"Yes, the burglar, bandit, thief—whatever you choose to call him. You'll admit it when you meet him. We are going there now."

"To—to—call?"

"To return the check I just told you about. You're the stupidest man I was ever engaged to, Horatio. Why can't you listen?"

"I am listening with all my ears."

"Then the trouble is with your imagination," Sylvia said in her loftiest tone.

They walked on in silence until presently the girl stopped before the gate of a small, weather-beaten cottage.

"Well, here we are at Elisha's," she remarked, turning in at the gate.

"What's he got to do with it?"

"Mercy, Hortie. You'll wear me to a shred. Elisha is the sheriff. I'm going to coax him to let us see the prisoner."

"You don't mean the chap is jailed here! My—!" he clapped his hand over his mouth. "Why, any red-blooded man could knock the whole house flat to the ground with a single blow of his fist. I'll bet I could."

"There wasn't any other place to put him."

"Well, if he stays incarcerated in a detention pen like this, he's a noble-minded convict—that's all I have to say."

They walked up the narrow clam-shell path, bordered by iris and thrifty perennials.

As they did so, the sound of a radio drifted through the open window.

Sylvia peeped in.

Elisha, too intent on the music to hear her step, was sitting before the loud speaker, smoking.

"I've come to see Mr. Heath," she shouted above the wails of a crooning orchestra.

"I ain't sure as I'd oughter let you see him," hesitated Elisha.

"I'll take the responsibility."

"Wal—mebbe on second thought, 'twill do no harm," he drawled. "He's round on the back porch. I'd come with you warn't I waitin' for the news flashes."

"That's all right. I can find him."

"Say, who you got with you?" called the sheriff over his shoulder.

"He's nobody—just my fiance."

"Your what?"

"The man I am going to marry."

"You don't tell me! So you're gettin' married, are you? Good lookin' feller! I heard at the post office you had some chap in the offin'. But to let him see Mr. Heath—I dunno as 'twould be just—"

"Where I go Horatio goes," Sylvia retorted.

Elisha weakened.

"Wal, in that case—" he began.

She waited to hear no more.

"Come on, Hortie," she called.

Leaving Elisha absorbed in a saxophone solo, the two rounded the corner of the cottage and found themselves in the presence of Stanley Heath.

CHAPTER XII

"Sylvia!" he cried, springing up and advancing toward her with outstretched hand. "Sylvia! What a brick you are to come!"

Angry as she was, when face to face with him she could not resist the contagion of his smile.

"I'm glad to see you so well," she said. "This is Mr. Horatio Fuller of Alton City."

Horatio looked Heath up and down and then stepped forward and gripped his hand with unmistakable cordiality.

"Mighty glad to know you, sir," was his greeting. "You seem to have got yourself into a jam. If there is anything I can do—any way I can be of service—"

"Horatio, you forget we are not here to make a social call," interrupted Sylvia, who had by this time regained her routed chilliness and indignation. "On the contrary, Mr. Heath, we have come on a very painful errand. We are returning this check to you."

She extended it toward him, gingerly holding its corner in the tips of her fingers as if it were too foul a thing to touch. "It was outrageous of you, insulting, to leave a thing of this sort for Marcia—to attempt to pay in cash—kindness such as hers."

"I'm sorry," Heath stammered.

"Sorry! You couldn't have been very sorry, or you would have sensed such an act would hurt her terribly."

Horatio Fuller fumbled nervously with his tie.

"You deserve," swept on young Sylvia with rising spirit, "to be thrashed. Hortie and I both think so—don't we, Hortie?"

Horatio Junior turned crimson.

"Oh, I say, Sylvia, go easy!" he protested. "Don't drag me into this. I don't know one darn thing about it. Suppose I just step inside and listen to the news flashes while you and Mr. Heath transact your business. It will be less awkward all round. If you want me you can speak."

Nodding courteously in Heath's direction, Horatio Junior disappeared.

"Your Mr. Fuller is a man of nice feeling," Stanley Heath declared looking after him. "I congratulate you."

"Thank you."

"Everything is settled then?"

She nodded.

"I hope you will be very happy."

She did not reply at once. When she did, it was to say with a humility new and appealing:

CALIFORNIA
NEWS OF THE WEEK

Schools Join Safety Crusade

Sacramento.—One out of every three school children in California is destined to be killed or injured in motor vehicle accidents before the end of his normal life span. This appalling figure was quoted by Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction, in announcing plans for courses in safe driving to be added to the school curriculum.

Million Dollar Stamp Purchase

Los Angeles.—$1,000,000 worth of 3-cent stamps were purchased from Uncle Sam by one customer here last week. The buyer was the Union Pacific railroad, which wanted 33,333,333 stamps of the new Boulder Dam memorial issue for their publicity value. The railroad runs through Boulder City, Nev.

Sales Tax Revenues Decline

Sacramento.—Sales tax returns for the third quarter of 1935, the first period reported under the new 3 per cent rate with foodstuffs exempted, showed a decrease of $816,881 compared with the preceding three months. Revenue for the quarter amounted to $15,871,571.

Duck Refuge Planned

Sacramento.—The United States Government has filed condemnation suit in the federal court for the acquisition of 10,775 acres of land in Colusa and Glenn Counties for the immediate creation of what is to be known as the Sacramento Migratory Water Fowl Refuge.

Bootlegging Not Lost Art

Soledad.—An alcohol still of 500 gallons daily capacity, the largest seized in Monterey county since repeal, was found by Federal agents near here. Three men were arrested and 40,000 gallons of mash, 500 gallons of whiskey, 75 gallons of alcohol and 100 sacks of sugar were confiscated.

Railroad Sued for Cruelty

San Francisco.—Because 263 sheep being shipped from Oregon to South San Francisco were confined 38 hours in one stretch in freight cars, two hours over the limit allowed by law, the government has filed suit against the Southern Pacific, asking a $500 penalty.

Camps for Transients

San Francisco.—Camps designed to care for and provide work for non-resident transients in California are being established by the Works Progress Administration, with 14 camps already open. A total of 50 is planned, to care for about 10,000 men.

Artificial Quakes Locate Oil

Los Angeles—New oil and gas fields are being discovered in the San Joaquin valley by exploding charges of dynamite in shallow holes, thus creating "artificial earthquakes," officials of the Southern California Gas Company have disclosed. Sensitive instruments, like seismographs, tell whether there are fields of oil and gas directly below.

Repair Floating Drydock

Mare Island.—The rare feat of placing a drydock in drydock will occur here when alterations are made on the Ard-1, floating drydock towed up from the San Diego destroyer base. New cranes, motor generator and other equipment will be installed at a cost of $42,000.

Grove Urged for Tribute

Dinuba.—Purchase of the Redwood Canyon grove of Big Trees, between Sequoia and General Grant National Parks, and declared to be one of the most beautiful groups of trees in the world, is being urged as a memorial to Will Rogers. The canyon is from eight to nine miles long and includes 4500 acres of timber.

Counties Exceed NHA Quotas

Sacramento—Three of the first fourteen counties in the United States to exceed their quotas under the modernization credit plan of the National Housing Act are in California. The counties, with percentages by which their quotas have been subscribed are: Calaveras, 117; El Dorado, 196, and Nevada, 223.

Firebugs Cause $150,000 Loss

San Jose.—Two fires, starting 20 minutes apart, destroyed two large warehouses in the industrial district, with loss of almost $150,000. Firemen and police are convinced the origin was incendiary.

Gold Mine Again Produces

Sonora.—Idle for thirty-five years, the Von Tromp mine has been dewatered and is being placed in shape for production. Recent work has exposed veins and shoots of profitable ore. The property is near Columbia and produced richly forty years ago.

Fish Pack Hits High Mark

San Francisco.—California canners packed 4,396,546 cases of various kinds of fish the first nine months this year. The sardine catch at Monterey and northern California canneries was 100,115 tons. Los Angeles packed more than a million cases of mackerel, and San Diego 749,832 cases of yellowfin tuna.

Big Brewery for Chico

Chico.—A brewery is to be built here at a cost of $150,000. It will be operated by Peter Marinoff of San Francisco.

Leaves Over 600 Living Offspring; 5 Generations

Over six hundred living descendants have been left by Engel Dine Janssen, a widow who has died at Esens, East Frisia, at the age of ninety-one years. The old lady had one husband and fourteen children, ten of whom married young, having in their turn an average of ten children apiece. These grandchildren married young in their turn, till at the end of her life Frau Janssen could point proudly to five generations of offspring.

Her family, from children to great-great-great-grandchildren, was spread over the whole region and beyond it.

The Political Weather Vane

Already the weather vane is making some swinging changes in the presidential political field, where wind and hot air are beginning to brush up. Many signs will be administered from now on, and in this age, tainted with graft and political crookedness, the vote-winning scepter will be making desperate movements in party politics.

All kinds of "dope" will be spread as a cure-all for depression and hard times. Many schemes are already "lying in state," waiting orders. Leaders in party ranks will "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel" that any expedient may be used.

How fascinating is politics! Soon the campaign will be welcoming with fluttering flags in the name of freedom and independence; decorative banners and bunting will be spread upon the walls and stages of auditoriums, and the patriotic blare of band instruments will stir enthusiasm for the crowd—the honest voter.

"Youth for work, age for leisure," has grown into a national slogan with added enthusiasm. During the years of depression the majority of the "flower of manhood" has been seeking jobs, and suffering other personal embarrassments, while age to some extent has made up the bulk of the employed with far more unemployed numbers in the ranks of the idle. Economically, it should be right the reverse! It looks as though one of the golden opportunities for young people today, is aligning thenselves for service, advancing the "Townsend Plan," which seems to be the open-door to a marvelous new civilization under the safest and surest economical leadership in all modern history. The situation of today is a selfish one. Too many people try to make money by giving less and getting more. Employers try to give less wages and get more work. Even some labor unions try to get more wages and do less work—not that old age is always an incompetent state, but modern business has a foolish idea of dispensing with veteran workers who represent experience and mature judgment. Thus, thinking about old age, is an invatationto senility, which also is wrong. It would be better to extend systematic, dignified financial aid to the elder citizens and by so doing put more money into circulation.

Christmas shopping has possessed the land, and perhaps one of the greatest human delights is in its prime, right now, while the merry season is on. If the average person could carry this happy disposition with them throughout the year, what would happen? It is one time when joyous duty is uppermost, selecting the proper gift. Goodwill permeates the air with, as George Eliot says: "The reward of one duty is the power to fulfill another." So goodness is catching, and the merchant has the best opportunity for observing it. Toyland is more attractive than ever, with gifts such as will make boys and girls shout with glee—and make the grownups really feel and realize that the world isn't such a bad place to live in after all. Low prices make it possible to give more toys than ever before, and give the kiddies the one Merry Christmas of their lives; for when these little bundles of possibilities are given such a treat, it makes Dad and Ma feel proud of their yuletide privilege.

Greater honor to California! This state is the first in the Union to enact a law to insure competency and honesty in the design and construction of its public school buildings. All the school buildings have been made more safe by degrees. They are being reconditioned in large numbers during a program which began after the earthquake of March, 1933, which shocked officialdom into building stronger, as well as more attractive structures. Horrible as the quake was, it did render a benefit to posterity. Possibly two thirds of the then existing school buildings in the state, about whose reliability there was a strong doubt, have now been examined and reported upon by various agencies. Programs for making these buildings safe have either been carried out or are being considered for action as soon as practicable.

Football is the champion of fall sports, and the professional has acquired that high degree of skill, athletic prowess and mental alertness that goes with the game. It is so finely balaneed that anything may happen at any time and frequently does during the game. One never realizes what good fun muscle play is until one gets the the play habit. It's exhilarating stretch, twist, turn, bend and kick. Rythmic movements of the body and vigorous muscle flexing, steady the nervous system, stimulate blood streams, wash out the lungs and have a beneficial effect upon the complexion and with the hardened muscles, the weight is kept at a healthy point. Football may be a little strenuous, but by care and skill it works no hardships unless the gorilla act is brought into the fight.

The Christmas Seal is making its bow once more; as usual it is a gesture appealing for patronage in support of this emblem for health, and the chief foe to youth, tuberculosis. The very message of the Seal, is a "thankfulness for health," and its wide-spread measure of service is in asking all to participate. While the investment is small with each one, yet millions of pennies make a mighty army in battling this malady. This annual campaign has been going on 34 years, and its benefits have gone into hospitals, sanitariums, clinics and rest homes. This evidence is sufficient to interest every Christmas shipper, who wants to decorate Christmas mail with this little stamp which today has found its way into almost every country in the world.

Friday, the 13th, is naturally looked upon as an evil omen of bad luck, but a certain amount of superstition is required to make the average Californian believe it. We had Friday, September 13th and now it is Friday, December 13th, making two of these hectic calendar dates within a space of four months. After all is said and done, it is more a joke than a belief. Folks discover that this day is as good as any other day, even that day when you pay your taxes!

October Business Showed Good Gain

Bank of America's October index of far western business registered 68.9, according to the bank's analysis and research department. This is 11.2 percent higher than a year ago, and 25 percent above the depression low in March, 1933.

Employment in California during October, 1935, exceeds the 1934 level by eight percent, and pay rolls have increased 17.7 percent over a year ago. For the tenth consecutive month, employment and pay rolls in manufacturing industries of Los Angeles county have shown an increase over the same period in 1934.

According to tabulated reports frm 100 retail stores, the value of far western retail trade advanced 11.5 percent during October over the same month of last year. The entire nation showed a gain of only six percent.

Everyone of the seven far western states showed a marked gain in the velocity of bank debits, which, according to this business review, is indicative of general business upturn. The gain in bank debits was 22 percent over October of last year. The bank debit total for 27 larger cities during October was the largest dollar value of debits reported in any month since July, 1931.

California showed a gain of 25.9 percent in the number of building permits issued during October over a year ago.

The general level of prices received by farmers in California for their products during October was 45.9 percent greater than the level of prices received during April, 1933, the all-time low for the index.

Leukemia is an infectious desease and runs a chronic course, manifested by drowsiness, droopiness and emaciation.

There is a marked pathological change in the character of the blood, the red cells becoming less numerous and the white cells rapidly multiplying.

There is no reliable treatment and as the disease is very infectious the sick birds should be killed and the premises periodically disinfected.

The liver, spleen and kidney are greatly enlarged and very pale in color.

THE following method usually works when a wheel you want to remove sticks so badly that the ordinary wheel-pulling methods fail. Jack up the corresponding wheel on the opposite side of the car. Unscrew the hub nut of the wheel you want to remove so as to bring the nut flush with the threaded end of the axle. Then strike the axle end a number of sharp blows with a heavy hammer. The combined pressure and jarring will almost always do the trick.

To straighten out dents in the body that can't easily be gotten at from inside, remove the enamel from the damaged area, sandpaper, and apply a light coating of solder. Bend a strong wire at right angles and solder one side of the angle to the center of the dent. Form the free end of the wire into a hook and insert a bar to act as a handle or lever. Pulling on this or using it as a lever will usually pull out the dent. Touch up with enamel after removing solder with a blowtorch.

Interesting History Of California Counties

Believing that the thousands of tourists who annually motor over the state's great highway system would like to know how the counties they visit came by their names, Director of Public Works Earl Lee Kelly, at the request of Governor Frank F. Merriam, has had prepared from state records a series of brief stories of the origin and meaning of the names of the counties of California including a few salient facts about each county.

—Editor.

Napa County — Created February 18, 1850. One of the original twenty-seven counties of the state. The word "Napa" means, in the language of a large and powerful tribe of Indians that lived in that section of California, "fish". Myriads of fish inhabited the Napa river and other streams of this section. This tribe of Indians was nearly exterminated by smallpox in 1838, and now the only evidence of their ever having existed is the name given to the county.

Picturesque mountains, cool canyons, fishing retreats, wooded hills, green valleys, spouting geysers and freaks of nature together with great wealth in agricultural products place Napa in an enviable position among California counties.

Agricultural production may be divided into three main classifications: Grapes, fruits and nuts; alfalfa and hay; and field crops, such as barley, oats, wheat, vegetables and berries. Hills provide feed and range for stockraising and the poultry industry is increasing rapidly. Napa is famous for its vineyards and wineries and a historic flour mill built in 1846.

Geysers near Calistoga spout at regular intervals, some of them shooting 300 feet in the air. Nearby is the Petrified Forest and a fine highway leads to the summit of Mt. St. Helena which towers to a height of 4343 feet. It was a signalling point for the Russians when they were endeavoring to get a foothold in California by extending their operations from Fort Ross on the Sonoma coast. In 1841 the Russian naturalisa, Wosnersemsky, named the mountain in honor of a Russian Empress. Robert Louis Stevenson resided near the summit in 1880 while writing the "Silverado Squatters". A monument has been erected there to his memory. Population: 22,897. Area: 783 square miles.

Nevada County — Created April 25, 1851. The word "Nevada" in Spanish means "snowy". The county derived its name from the perpetual snow-capped mountains within its boundaries.

This county has given to the world $300,000,000 in gold and produces oranges at one end and ice at the other. It is one of the state's richest counties in scenic attractions, farming, mining and lumbering. In the western section, roses bloom the year around while at Donner Lake near its eastern boundary the annual snowfall is from ten to twenty feet. Its golden era dates from 1848. The rocker was the first machine used for washing gold, followed by the long-tom which in turn gave place to the sluice. Hydraulicking was first undertaken in 1852 and by 1876 $100,000,000 was invested in plants, equipment and property for this form of mining. In 1884 hydraulic mining was prohibited by law. Within a radius of six miles from Grass Valley are 110 gold mines, while within a radius of five miles from Nevada City are 120 mines with more than one-tenth of the population engaged in this industry. Here are the Empire, North Star, Maryland-Idaho, Malahoff and other famous mines.

Dry farming is successful, but most growers rely upon irrigation. More than 1,000 miles of ditches and flumes costing $4,250,000 furnish water for orchards and farms. Leading fruits are pears, apples, plums and prunes with a large harvest of oranges. Dairying and stock and poultry raising are major industries.

In the eastern section of the county is historic Donner Lake, where George and Jacob Donner with a company of emigrants were imprisoned by snow from November until February 19, 1846. Most of them perished before the first relief party from California reached them. The horrible suffering they endured is a tragic part of early California history. East of Donner Lake is Truckee, one of the state's most popular winter playgrunds. Population: 10,596. Area: 974 square miles.

Orange County—Created March 11, 1889. This county was given its name by the legislature because of the orange groves for which it is justly famous. It was "carved" out of the southeastern portion of Los Angeles County.

This county is one of the richest in the United States per cultivated acre. The total annual agricultural production is approximately $52,000,000. Here is the home of the Valencia orange, which ripens in May and will hang upon the tree until November without deterioration. On account of its highly productive oil fields, Orange stood for many years as the second county in the state in the production of minerals. Annual production of oil, gasoline and other oil products has reached the high sum of $50,000,000 a year, and yet that production now is surpassed by the Valencia orange in valuation.

Orange county is entering upon a period of intensive development. It is less than 35 miles from Los Angeles, San Diego is 90 miles south, while San Bernardino, Redlands, Riverside and other cities may be reached in an hour's drive. It has more than 1000 miles of hard surfaced highways and less than 50 miles of arteries commonly known as dirt roads.

Citrus fruits and tropical and semi-tropical fruits are raised in abundance. Over 51,000 acres are devoted to citrus fruits alone. The county has 40 miles of ocean shore line with many attractive beaches. Newport Bay is the only land-locked harbor for hundreds of miles. Here is the noted Marine Research branch of the California Institute of Technology. At San Juan Capistrano is the mission of that name founded in 1776.

With its beautiful homes, delightful beaches, vast orange groves, oil fields and growing industries, Orange is one of California's greatest counties. Population: 118,674. Area: 795 square miles.

Next: Placer, Plumas and Riverside.

A Right Merrie Christmas Dinner

THE formula for a good Christmas dinner is somewhat a matter of geography. Although the spirit of Yuletide is the same the world over—customs and foods differ.

English dinners at Christmas time have always held a particular fascination, perhaps because of the colorful accounts of these meals in classic literature. Addison in "The Spectator" likes to see the whole village merry in his great hall. "I allow a double quantity of Malt to my small Beer, and set it a running for twelve Days to every one that calls for it. I have always a Piece of cold Beef and a Mince-Pye upon the table, and am wonderfully pleased to see my Tenants pass away a whole Evening in playing their innocent Tricks, and smutting one another."

Cranberries—Cheeses—Coffee

Washington Irving in "The Sketch Book" says "A distinguished post was allotted to 'ancient sirloin,' as mine host termed it; being, as he added, 'the standard of old English hospitality, and a joint of goodly presence, and full of expectation.'"

So, whether you plan to have the roast beef of England, goose, roast stuffed suckling pig, or our own American turkey to grace your Christmas table, see that your menu is "right merrie" with the bright red of cranberries and perhaps tomatoes, plum pudding which is excellent in any language, and cheeses, nuts, raisins and black coffee to wax eloquent over. How does the following menu appeal to you for a merry Christmas dinner?

Celery Assorted Stuffed Olives
Shrimp Appetizer
Roast Stuffed Suckling Pig
Cranberry and Pineapple Ice
Mashed Sweet Potatoes
Scalloped Tomatoes
Cucumber and Radish Salad
Plum Pudding with Vanilla Ice Cream or with Rum Sauce
Assorted Cheese
Nuts Black Coffee Raisins

Shrimp Appetizer: Combine three-fourths cup chili sauce, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, two tablespoons lemon juice, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one tablespoon grated horseradish and two drops tabasco sauce, and chill thoroughly. Remove the viscera from two small cans of shrimp, being careful not to break the shrimp. Chill well. Divide the cocktail sauce among eight small glasses and sprinkle with chopped green pepper. Set glasses in small bowls of crushed ice, if possible. If not, set on small paper doilies on glass plates. Then hook the shrimp over the rims of the glasses, using four to six shrimp to each glass.

Cranberry and Pineapple Ice: Boil two-thirds cup sugar and one-half cup water for five minutes. Dissolve in it one and one-half teaspoons gelatin which has been softened in four tablespoons cold water. Cool. Add one and one-half cups canned pineapple juice, one and one-half cups bottled cranberry juice and two tablespoons lemon juice, and freeze to a stiff mush. If frozen in refrigerator trays, stir often until mushy; then remove to a cold bowl and beat well. Return to trays and continue freezing. Serve with the meat course.

The Christian home makers class of the Baptist church will meet at the home of their teacher, Mrs. W. S. Dunn, 4773 Brighton avenue, Friday evening of this week. Every member is urged to attend.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

The words of the Psalmist, "The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore," constitute the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "God the Preserver of Man" on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Lesson - Sermon presents these Scriptural selections from Mark about Jesus: "And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught. . . . And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her. And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them."

Among the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, are the statements: "Truth is God's remedy for error of every kind, and Truth destroys only what is untrue. Hence the fact that, to-day, as yesterday, Christ casts out evils and heals the sick."

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"The Mahatmans and Their Teachings" is the topic of the forum-lecture to be given by Mrs. Grace Knoche at Theosophical headquarters, Sunday, December 15, at 3 p. m. Mrs.. Knoche will attempt to make clear that contrary to the ideas held by some, the Mahatmans are human beings. "They are men", she declares, "of the family of Mankind, not spirits or angles or spooks. But they are very highly evolved men, so grandiose both intellectually and spiritually that compared with the average human being they seem divine. Yet they have nothing in them that the average man does not have in germ, for each one of us has within the core of the core of his being the Inner Light, and it was by following that Light that the Mahatmans became what they are.

"Other names for the Mahatmans are masters, elder brothers, initiates, adepts, seers, arhats, great teachers and sages. They are the guides and protectors of humanity and of every good work begun in the service of humanity. Above all they are teachers. They are known, believed in and revered in the far east. It is only in the Occident that skeptical minds have made the idea of Mahatmans seem strange."

O. I. Clark will assist Mrs. Knoche in answering questions.

PTA HOLD CHRISTMAS PROGRAM MONDAY

Ocean Beach Parent-Teacher association met Monday in the school auditorium at 2 p. m. A Christmas program, supervised by the teachers, presented the kindergarten orchestra while each class-room of the school followed across the stage, each group giving its own interpretation of some subject their group has been studying. Christmas carolers, Chinese dancers, Indian maidens in costume, a "country dance" and more carolers in huge red collars, holding classic red song sheets before them, made the occasion a happy one for the many parents who came and who gathered around a tea table later, during the social hour. Mrs. Bert Wenrich, Mrs. I. W. Parks and Mrs. L. Winans poured tea.

Mrs. Esther Wisdom announces that a gift box is being placed at the school to receive donations of unperishable foods for filling our Christmas basket, which will be distributed in Ocean Beach at Christmas time.

Friday, Dec. 20th. regular social night in the school auditorium.

EXPO TO FEATURE BEDS OF PANSIES

Visitors to the 1936 Exposition will behold many new sights in landscaping and probably the most outstanding among them will be a bed of yellow, gold and blue pansies half a mile long and 400 feet wide in the Plaza de America, between the Tower of the Sun and the Ford building. H. O. Davis, in charge of the color scheme for the grounds, said pansy beds of varied colors will be every where throughout the grounds.

Patrons of concerts in the Ford bowl will see huge banks of bougainvillea surrounding the concrete amphitheater, and across the canyon to the east will be a flaming carpet of creeping lantana, according to Davis' plans. The plaza from El Cid to the organ amphitheater will be planted with 20,000 white and pink frees as.

GOODWILL WORKERS WILLING TO EARN

Rev. Myron Insko, superintendent of the San Diego County Goodwill Industries, reporting to the board of directors on the workings of his organization for the month of November, states that the average number daily being given "Not Charity but a Chance" during the month was 48 as compared with 51 in October. The payroll, however, last month was 24 percent in excess of that of November 1934.

An increasingly large number of men who ask for aid but refuse to work for the clothing and shoes they need is reported. It appears that as long as they can get these things free they do not feel any obligation to toil for them. Some of this type are sent by other organizations in order to test their attitude. The Goodwill workers are of different type, glad of the opportunity to give an honest day's work in exchange for the cash or articles the receive.

CAMP FIRE NEWS

During a very interesting meeting last Friday, we discussed the Christmas honor. To earn this our group is going caroling Christmas eve. Also we are preparing a box of toys to send to the children in Rest Haven home. If any of you who read this have some toys that the boys and girls of Rest Haven might like, would you olease leave them with Katherine Coull at 1869 Cable street. They would be appreciated.

After the business meeting we practiced Christmas carols. Jennie Lou Lee and Katherine Coull will accompany with mandolin and guitar.

The meeting will be held, as usual, next Friday at 3:30 o'clock.

"Eye" Gauges Rays Unseen Stars Cast

Device to Be Auxiliary to Largest Telescope.

Pasadena, Calif.—Astronomers have revealed plans for an electric "eye" so powerful it will sight a candle's flame thousands of miles away, to be an auxiliary to the world's largest telescope.

The "eye" is an extraordinarily delicate photoelectric cell, for use in measuring the amount of light given off by stars millions of miles out of sight of the human eye.

It will be used in conjunction with the giant 200-inch telescope, rated at a power sufficient to show up skyscrapers on the moon and soon to be constructed on a southern California mountain top.

To Gather Light Rays.

Dr. George Ellery Hale, veteran astronomer and director emeritus of Mount Wilson observatory, outlined plans for the new telescope and its auxiliaries in the Astrophysical Journal.

The "eye" consists of a target of a sensitive metal inside the cell. Light rays traveling perhaps 20,000,000 or 50,000,000 miles from distant stars are gathered in by the massive round reflector of the telescope and focused on the cell.

Faint though the light rays are, they excite electrons in the sensitive metal, in turn generating electrical currents, very feeble but still measurable. By measuring the strength of the electrical current a distant star sets up the astronomers will be able to compute the star's relative brightness.

Eyes Already in Use.

Such electric "eyes" now in use with the present world's largest 100-inch telescope at Mount Wilson are powerful enough to spot a candle 3,000 miles distant with the aid of the telescope of seven miles distant without such amplification.

With the new telescope, twice as big and four times as powerful, for which a 16-foot pyrex reflector is now cooling at a Corning (N. Y.) glass works, greater distances are expected.

Construction details of the telescope are now being worked out by scientists. The tremendous barrel will require a mount comparable to that of a big gun.

When installed, probably atop Mount Palomar near San Diego, it is expected to have a possible amplification power that would bring the moon to within an apparent distance of 25 miles of the earth.

Lives in a Churn

Leon Plant, sixty-five year-old handy man in the village of Rosseau, Minn., has consistently refused the aid of state and federal relief agencies, although his age and inactivity make him eligible. Plant obtained an old butter churn from the estate of a defunct creamery where he once was employed and has made it his home for the past four years. A crude bed, oil stove, clock and other scant necessities comprise the furnishings of his adopted home.

Indiana Man Owns Watch Carried by Washington

LaGrange, Ind.—A watch, once owned by President George Washington, is possessed by Milo Tucker, farmer.

President Washington gave the watch to Tucker's great-great-grandfather, Rev. Edward Evens, at the close of the Revolutionary war in 1781, and it has been handed down to each succeeding generation.

The timepiece is two inches in diameter and seven-eighths of an inch in thickness, with a one-half inch stem. It has two cases, both of a silver color. The outer case must be removed to wind the watch.

The name of the manufacturer, N. Haushirst, New York, is engraved on the back.

The watch ran the last time it was wound, but the winding key has been misplaced.

Sailor's Message Found in Herring

Berlin.—On opening a herring that she had bought, a woman at Schocow, found a tiny bottle inside it. And inside that she found a strip of paper. On it the sailor of a fishing trawler "somewhere at sea" asked to be informed who had found his message, as he would like to know where one of the herrings he had caught had been eaten. Now he knows.

THE CRIMSON STAIN

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

At the funeral service of the celebrated cartoonist, Mr. Sidney Smith, author of "The Gumps," the officiating minister sent a challenge straight home to the hearts of every person in attendance at that service. It was an appeal for less reckless automobile driving. The death of Mr. Smith added one more to the roll of those killed in automobile accidents.

On October 29, 1935, the total killed for this year in Cook county, Illinois alone, was 795 persons. The total number killed in the United States averages about 36,000 persons, annually. This, of course, does not take into account the vast army, numbering hundreds of thousands of persons, who have been incapacitated for work. Add to this, the suffering and deprivation of those who were dependent for support upon those made cripples for life, and we have a shocking and heart-breaking picture of the crimson stain which stretches across our country.

Some people think statistics are cheap. Perhaps they are; but the flagrancy of this crimson stain can be told in no better way than in terms of figures. From the sinking of the Titanic to the recent wreck of the airship, Akron, six catastrophes have occurred which have killed 3,152 persons. But, this "same number of people lose their lives in auto accidents every 36 days." From 1919 to the close of 1933, in the United States alone, there were 348,046 automobile deaths. One might argue that the cause of these fatalities was defective parts in the cars themselves, but this idea is at once dismissed when we remember that 92.4 per cent of cars in accidents were in good condition and less than one-half of one per cent were due to defective mechanism. We are informed that 84 per cent of accidents occur in clear weather, leaving 16 per cent for foggy weather and winter's snow and sleet; 74 per cent occur on dry surfaced roads, leaving 26 per cent for slippery roads; all of which clearly indicates that the cause of this "crimson stain" is nothing but reckless, careless, thoughtless driving.

It is high time that this menace be regarded as a moral problem, and that the solution be found in an appeal to the conscience of every person driving a car. Let conscience compel obedience to this resolution:

"I will observe the Golden Rule."

Relic Recalls Episode in French-English War

Campbellton, New Brunswick.—The hulk of the French merchant vessel, the Bienfaisant, relic of the last battle between the French and English in Canada 175 years ago, has been found in the Restigouche river, near here.

The vessel was abandoned by its crew and set afire in July, 1760, to prevent capture by English warships. It sank on the Quebec side of the Restigouche river and has rested there ever since.

This fall, because of unusually low tides, part of the hulk has become visible and souvenir hunters are stripping it. Using simple equipment, they have recovered a number of cannon balls, iron urn-shaped bombs and other relics.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

IT IS the portion of everyone at some time to wash dishes. Even when a person takes meals out, or does not have to attend to kitchen work, there are times and emergencies when washing a few dishes at least, has to be done. In hotels and restaurants, and in some homes, there are dish washing machines to relieve the tedium of the task, but in the average homes, dishpan, soap and water, dish mop and dishcloth are employed three times a day!

In view of this fact, it is well for everyone to know how to do the work best. There are agents that lessen the labor—soap, in some form, is chief among them, with washing soda, ammonia, and steel wool as incidental aids, each very helpful at times and under certain circumstances.

Cold water as a first aid is essential to speedy and satisfactory washing of egg dishes, and those in which flour has been used in mixing ingredients either in making thickening or in making cakes. With eggs, the albumen hardens under heat, and sticks, so cold water which takes it off quickly, should be used first. Put cold water in egg cups as soon as used, and make washing of them easy. Also, put it in bowls in which eggs have been beaten, or into which eggs have been broken or combined with other ingredients. In the case of flour, it becomes a mucilagenous paste when hot water mixes with it, and this sticks almost as fast as glue, unless cold water is first used to clean the particles off.

Greasy Dishes.

Dishes in which there is grease or fat, butterplates, bacon platters, milk and cream bottles, salad dishes, etc., should be washed in as hot water as is good for the ware, for only so will the oil be cleared out quickly. If milk and cream bottles are emptied, and not washed right away, fill them with cold water. The liquid keeps them from drying, as drying makes them adhesive. Later wash them in hot water.

Never plunge glassware into hot water. Use warm water until the glass gets tempered. Afterwards, it will withstand water that is practically scalding hot, providing, of course that the ware is perfect.

Fish dishes and utensils will not retain the fishy odors if they are put in cold water, which is gradually brought to a scalding point. Pans and pots in which fish has been cooked can be so treated, and the water be brought to a boil in them. Good dishes should be given a first washing in cold water, then warm soapy water in which a little washing soda has been dissolved and a trifle of household ammonia added. Rinse all dishes with scalding water. Incidentally they will dry almost of themselves.

Color in the Kitchen.

Color has come into the kitchen. A generation ago practically all kitchens were painted a dull brown, perhaps to blend with the coal dust. The kitchen was the least attractive room in the house. But a number of things have occurred and changed our attitude toward this room in which so many housekeepers spend many hours of the day.

In the reaction from the dull kitchen of the past and with the development of sanitary open plumbing, the tendency was to make the revised kitchen white in its appointments. There is certainly something to be said for white tile and white woodwork which show every mark so easily that it just naturally demands cleaning.

A new note in kitchen treatment, however, has been sounded. The introduction of artistic linoleum was, perhaps, the first signal of this. The next note of color came into the kitchen by way of curtains and colored oil cloth. Tables in colored enamel began to be offered. Stoves adopted color for their enamel fittings, and now we have utensils in red, green, blue and yellow to harmonize with our color scheme.

Modern Textiles

Today the process of manufacture of materials has advanced decidedly in the matter of reproducing effects. Mercerizing supplies cotton cloths of ordinary nature with a softness of quality to the touch that can be akin to satins and damasks. There are many different finishes that can be given cotton and linen to make them resemble more expensive textiles. Artificial silks of many sorts bring within the reach of the average purse upholstery fabrics, drapery materials, etc., which can unite the elements so desirable, yet without increasing prices.

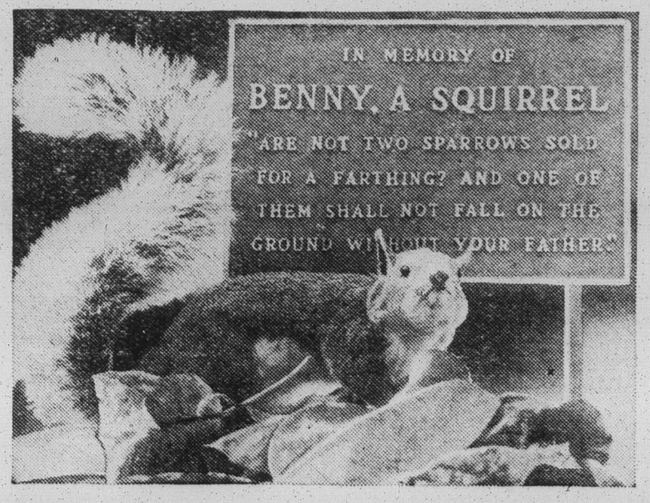
Memory of a Squirrel Is Honored



IN MEMORY OF
BENNY, A SQUIRREL
"ARE NOT TWO SPARROWS SOLD FOR A FARTHING? AND ONE OF THEM SHALL NOT FALL ON THE GROUND WITHOUT YOUR FATHER."

Standing in solemn dignity adjacent to a statue of Beethoven and a majestic figure memorializing Los Angeles' soldier dead, a bronze plaque was erected in Pershing square, Los Angeles, in honor of "Benny, a Squirrel." For many years Benny was one of the most popular and widely known of the denizens of Pershing square. A year ago, while on one of his trips across a busy street, Benny was killed by a speeding motorist. Friends buried his broken body in Pershing square and a mock orange tree was planted to mark his resting place. Through local civic officials, a bronze plaque was engraved in honor of the late squirrel.

It's a Sweet World as Far as Desserts Go; Variety in Sugar

Honey Was First Sweetening; Maple Sugar and Corn Sirup Add Bit.

Although we do not usually consider sugar with the flavorings, if we were for any reason deprived of our customary amount of sugar we would soon realize that its special value is from the flavor angle. Actually starchy foods can replace sugar in food value, but they are so bland that they are not substitutes at all for the sugar flavor.

When we use the word sugar in terms of foodstuffs we usually mean granulated sugar made from the juice of the cane or from beets. Other forms of sweetening from cane sugar are brown sugar and molasses, which have a much more distinctive flavor than granulated sugar, although a little less sweetness. We use them particularly on account of flavor. Sometimes granulated sugar is caramelized to give it more flavor. Caramel is very easily prepared by stirring sugar in a heavy frying pan over a low fire until it melts. If we are using it at once it can be added to the dish it is to flavor in this form. If it is to be kept we will add a little water and stir over the fire until we have a smooth thin sirup.

Maple sirup and sugar have a delicate, delicious flavor. We will hope the winter will not be too open to give a good season, which starts at the first thaw after a cold winter. There is an increasingly large production of maple sirup and sugar for flavoring purposes. It is, however, a mere nothing compared to the enormous sugar production as a whole.

Another form of sweetening as flavoring which is used to some extent is a modern development. This is corn sirup made from cornstarch. It is not quite as sweet as sugar. It comes in several flavors. It is used as sirup for griddle cakes and waffles, with sugar for candies and to some extent, desserts. It is a real asset in candy making, as it makes a mixture of a creamy texture which is difficult to achieve when using sugar alone. If too much is used the candy will not harden.

Honey is another form of sugar. This is probably the first sweetening known to man. The honey industry has been greatly developed in the last four years. Strained honey is packed in jars and is sold as a "spread" and for sweetening and flavoring other foods by itself or combined with sugar. "Wild honey," which we see mentioned among the foods of primitive man, is quite different from the honey of today, with its different characteristic flavor, which depends upon the flower from which the bees draw it.

Honey Nut Bran Muffins.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups bran
¾ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup honey
1 tablespoon melted butter
1½ cups milk

Sift flour, baking powder, soda, and salt together, add bran and walnuts. Mix honey, melted butter, and milk. Add to dry ingredients. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) twenty-five minutes.

Old-Fashioned Walnut and Date Cake

¾ pound dates
1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg well beaten
½ pound shelled walnuts, chopped
1½ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon soda

Stone and cut up dates, add water, stir once or twice and allow to cool. Cream butter and sugar together; add the egg, dates and nuts and then the flour mixed and sifted with soda. Beat well and pour into greased shallow pans or patty pans. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees F.) about twenty-five minutes. Serve with sweetened whipped cream if used as dessert.

Maple Sugar Shortcake.

2 cups flour
2 tsp. baking powder
¾ tsp. salt
4 tbsp. sugar
5 tbsp. fat
½ to 1 cup milk

Mix and sift the dry ingredients and rub in the fat. Make a hole in the flour at the side of the bowl and add a half cup of liquid. Stir in enough flour to make a ball of soft dough. Remove this from the bowl and add to the remaining flour enough liquid to make a soft dough. Divide the dough in half and roll each half the same size and shape. Place one layer on a greased pan, butter slightly, and place the other layer on top of the first. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit). Split and cover with shaved maple sugar and chopped nuts. Place the other layer on top and cover with sweetened whipped cream. Garnish with shaved maple sugar and whole nuts.

Out of Our Weakness Comes Lasting Strength

Is is true of a human life that it finds its highest enjoyment in the consciousness of progress. Our times of greatest pleasure are when we have won some higher peak of difficulty, trodden under foot some evil, refused some pleasant temptation for truth's sake, been swept out of ourselves by love, and felt day by day in such high labors so sure a growth of moral strength within us, that we cannot conceive of an end of growth.—Stopford Brooke.

High sixth showed some of their music appreciation work and upper graders in chorus concluded the program by singing well-known carols. A large group of parents attended the performance.

VISIT BY MR. McMULLEN

Mr. McMullen who spends all his time on the water front and who writes for the newspapers, came to Miss Shea's L6 room Tuesday to talk to the class about boats that come into the San Diego harbor, and the cargo that they bring. He explained that when a passenger ship came into the harbor that they went out to it in a small boat to find out if there were important passengers aboard. His talk was very interesting, and the children enjoyed hearing about the routes which the steamships take today compared with those of the old sail boats.

LUMBER COMPANY VISITED

The children in Miss McCabe's room went to visit the Benson Lumber company last Friday.

They have been studying about trees and their uses, as well as reading about lumbering. The log raft, the great saws, the planing mill, the box factory, the tunnel where the wood was treated to resist termites were just a few of the many interesting things they saw.

The students wish to thank the following who kindly provided transportation: Mrs. Albrecht, Mrs. Parks, Mrs. Perdue, Mr. Chappelle, and Mrs. Bell.
